Last night Peterkins came up with me to keep guard against any further intrusion of mice. I put her to sleep on the couch: but she discarded the red shawi I had prepared for her at the bottom, and lay at the top most uncomfortably in a parcel of milinery into which from one end I had already made excavations, so that it formed a large bag. Into the further end of this bag Turks crept and snuggled down; but every time she turned in the night (and it seemed very often) the brown maner crackied and woke me up. 50

Your never satisfied but always loving.

OST BELOVED: I have been thinking, staring at this blank piece of paper, and wondering how there am I ever to say what I have in me here—not wishing to say anything at all, but just to be! I feel that I am living now only because you love me; and that my life will have run out, like this penful of ink, when that use have to do and be—hardly begun! I will not call even this "midsummer," however much it seems so; it is still only Bpring.

Every day your love binds me more deeply than I knew the day before; so that no day is the same now, but each one a little happier than the isst. My own, you are my very own! And yet, true as that is, it is not so true as that I am your own. It is less absolute, I mean; and must be so, because I cannot very well take possession of anything when I am given over heart and soul out of my own possession; there isn't enough identity left in me. I am yours so much, so much! All this is useless to say, yet what can I say else, if I have to begin saying anything?

Could I truly be your "star and goddess," as you call me, beloved, I would do you the service of Thetis at least (who did it for a greater than herself)—"Bid heaven and earth combine their chaims.

Letter VII. "Bid heaven and earth combine their charms, And round you early, round you late, Briareus foid his hundred arms Tô guard you from your single fate."

But I haven't got power over an eight-armed octopus even; so am merely a very helpless loving nonemity which merges itself most happliy in you, and begs to be lifted to no pedestal at all, at all.

made thing in the hall, and yet I kissed it as I went by. And that was at a time when we were only at, the handshaking stage, the palsied beginnings of love:—you, I mean!

But oh, to get you interested in the beautiful flowing opening—not too flowing:—the beautiful flowing opening—not too flowing:—the heart of me has to come, and the wind-up of the skirt, a long reluctant tailing-off, fall of commas and colons of ribbon to make it seem longer, and insertions everywhere. If dreamed myself in it, retiring through the door after having bidden you goodinght, and you watching the long disappearing eloquence of that tail, still saying to you as it vanished. "Good-by, good-by. I love you so! See me, how slowly I am golong!"

Well, that is a bit of my dressmaking, a very corporate part of my affection for you; and you are not a bit interested for I have shown you none.

D ELOVED: I have been trusting to fate, while keeping silence, that something from you was to come And it has; bless you abundantly! You out to have a look at me, smiles and goes back again. Dearest, you must feel how I thank you, for I cannot say it; body and soul I grow too much blessed with all that you have given me, both visibly and invisibly, and always perfectly.

And as for the day: I have been tiplinking you the most uncurious of men, because you had not asked; and supposed, it was too early days yet for you to remember that I had ever been born. To-day is my birthday! You said nothing, so I said nothing; and yet this has come. I trusted my star to show its gweet influences in its own way. Or, after all, did you know, and had you sked any one but me? Yet had you sked any one but me? Yet had you from heaven; and, in the event, you will pardon me for having been still scretive it that the motion comes straight to you from heaven; and, in the event, you will pardon me for having been still scretive and shy in not telling what you did not inquire after. Yours I knew, dear, quite long ago, so had no need to ask you for it. And it is six months before you will be in the same year with me again, and shy in not telling what you did not inquire after. Yours I knew, dear, quite long ago, so had no need to ask you for it. And it is six months before you will be in the same year with me again, and the strongest wish of all that can pass through the strolighted the strolighted the strolighted to be a friend to somebody.

It is man's arrogant certsinty of his future which makes him impatient of the world "friendship;" it cools life to his slips, he is so confident that the headier nectar is his due.

I came upon a little phrase the other day that touched messo deeply, it said so well what I have wanted to say since we have known each other. Some peasant rhymer, an Irishman, is singing his love's praises and sinks his voice from the height of his passionate superlay. He had the strolight of his passionate superlay to show that the motion comes straight to your friendship? It was a look of the world. The same had the strolight of the world friendship i than the first. Mr. and Mrs. Henschel were both in excellent voice, and the audience was in a most appreciative mood. Mrs. Henschel's delivery of the lovely "Auttrasge," with her husband's accompaniment, was one of the hits of the afternoon.

Mr. Henschel's interpretation of "The Ruined Mill" was his best work. The recital came to an end with some examples of the modern French school of light opern. Mr. and Mrs. Henschel are said to be on their farewell tour, as far as this country is concerned.

Mrs. Barmore in Convulsions Upset a Lamp.

Reclining on a couch, reading a nove the funeral of Mrs. Lucy Nagle, mother of Commissioner of Street Cleaning Percy Nagle, who was stricken with heart disease yesterday.

It is said that Mrs. Nagle was grieved by the recent mention of her son's name in connection with gambling commission which Lewis Nixon says exists in this city.

Reclining on a couch, reading a novel, Mrs. Hanna Barmore, of Willing and Jamaica avenues, East New York, came suddenly to her death by fire.

She was seized with convulsions and in her paroxysmas overturned a table lamp. Her clothes, drenched with the blazing oil, were burned before help arrived. She died in St. Mary's Hospital without regaining consciousness.
